How to convert Million, Billion, Trillion into Lakh, Crore, Arab

February 16, 2018 • 449 Views

Substantial confusion can exist when it comes to the numbering system as used in Pakistan and other South Asian countries, and the real task is vast internationally. It is not surprising that such a difference exists, because this was the region where the modern numbering system originated and then spread through the Middle East to Europe, with variations emerging along the way.

However, this can be particularly elusive for the investor or buyer trying to convert one numbering system into another one. How much is a crore? How much is a 100 million? How much is 1,000,000? This can be doubly confusing for people, particularly overseas Pakistanis, who will have to convert a foreign currency into Pakistani Rupees and, at the same time, perform the conversion too. To assist you with the process, here's a table on how you can convert Pakistan currency values into international values, along with the numerals as well.

English	Urdu	Numbers

One hundred	Sat	100
One thousand	Hajar	1,000
One hundred	Asi Hajar	10,000
